Riley loves Happy Dog Café Day Care

A lot of dogs don't seem to like going to kennels when their owners are busy or on holiday. Riley, from North Carolina, appears to be an exception to this rule. His owner, Tonia Mosteller, left him in her back garden when she went off to run errands. The naughty dog managed to lift the latch on the backyard gate, after earlier seeing the dogs from his day care, who he usually plays with, walk past. Riley, who is a familiar face at the Happy Dog Cafe, gave them all a shock when he turned up without his owner.

Ms Mosteller told: "We walk Riley every day, usually through town and sometimes we will stop by the day care. Riley knows his way around town." Riley was looked after in the day care centre for free until Ms Mosteller could pick him up later. Apparently, he had a great time playing with all his friends until he went home. His owners have since put a proper lock on the gate.
