Rupert, the anxious dog

by Richard Hartley-Parkinson

Rupert the dalmatian is an anxious dog who doesn't like strangers coming near him. So when he had to go in for an operation there was a problem – his vet Mike Ferrell couldn't get near him. Mike and Rupert's owner Sonya Schiff came up with an idea. Sonya said that Rupert sleeps on a mouse onesie, so she suggested that Mike put it on to pick up the familiar smell. And it worked. Rupert immediately became best friends with Mike and he was able to perform surgery.

Mike said: 'Initially Rupert growled when I tried to examine him.' Committed to making his patients feel at ease, Mike decided to dress up in the unwashed outfit to see if Rupert would be less anxious. The result – while hilarious – was highly effective and Mike was able to examine Rupert safely and then perform surgery on his hip.
