

Christmas gifts

- 1 Many children know the bitter moment when they tear off the bright wrapping of their desired Christmas gift to reveal the wrong colour trainers or an ugly-looking toy. But one German boy, enraged by his miserable selection of Christmas presents, was not content to react with a thin smile and unenthusiastic 'thank you'. Instead, he called the police. Having dialed the emergency services hotline, the child explained to the police that he had not received any of the gifts he had requested for Christmas.

- 2 "The officers arrived and found a very angry little boy," said a spokesman from the local police in Zetel, Germany. Since they had a quiet shift on Christmas Day, the police decided to play along and started an investigation into the case. First, they examined the Christmas list that the child had written. Then they compared it with each of the gifts offered to the boy. After that they began a family session. After a thorough examination of the evidence, the police were able to resolve the family quarrel. They convinced the boy that Santa Claus must have confused his wish list with that of another child.
