

Teenager moves into senior living complex

- 1 No matter how much you do your research, there's always a certain level of uncertainty about moving to a new neighborhood. This couldn't be more true for 19-year-old Madison Kohout – she never expected to find herself living in the community she accidentally ended up in. When she was moving from Oklahoma to Arkansas, she was searching for an affordable two-bedroom apartment. She came across a listing for $350 a month and immediately signed the contract without visiting it in person. When she moved in days later, she discovered her neighbors were all over 65 years old. She soon realized that she had moved into a senior living complex.
- 2 “The first week of moving here was crazy!” Madison revealed. “I was busy with finding a job and setting up my apartment, I didn't even notice! I thought it was a bit weird that all of my neighbors were significantly older than me.” While she was exploring her new surroundings, the teenager came across a sign that said ‘Senior Living Apartments’. Once she saw the sign, everything became clear. She says, “I was like, ‘Oh, my goodness, I can't believe I did this'.”
- 3 Even though the apartments are designed for seniors, they were advertised as ‘equal opportunity housing’, meaning they do not discriminate based on age. Therefore, Madison was able to move in without question. According to Madison, her new neighborhood is nice and quiet, since her neighbors are always sleeping by the time she gets home. The teenager also claims she can play music as loud as she likes, since some of her neighbors are hard of hearing. Madison reports that she's been warmly welcomed by the other residents, and some of them have even invited her over for dinner and left snacks at her door. Madison says, “It's like having extra sets of grandparents.”
