

Lost dog in Thailand

- 1 There's a reason why dogs are considered man's best friend. That definitely is true for Leo. The dog's story was recently shared online by a Thai internet user called Pravat. He spotted Leo hanging around the road, acting as though he was abandoned, when a woman came by to feed him. After asking around, Pravat found out Leo had actually been waiting along the same street for four years now.
- 2 According to the feeder, Pinnuchawet, she had tried bringing Leo home as he had been rather skinny and was suffering from leprosy. However, Leo escaped from her house days later and returned to the road where he was first found. The dog was not willing to follow Pinnuchawet home again, so she had no choice but to bring the food to him.
- 3 Kind-hearted internet users helped to share Leo's story on social media in hopes of reuniting him with his owners. Leo's lucky stars shined down on him when a family contacted the original poster saying Leo looked like BonBon, a dog they had lost four years ago. The first owner, Noi, explained that they had brought their dog along to visit their relatives. When they stopped at a gas station, they realised BonBon was no longer in the car.
- 4 The family was extremely happy to find out that he was alive and well after so many years. Even though BonBon wagged his tail in excitement when they were finally reunited, he was unwilling to follow Noi home. After having a discussion, Noi and Pinnuchawet decided it would be better for the latter to care for him while Noi dropped by every now and then to help.
