[a] In reaction to the protests, Headmistress Nicola Haddock apologized in a letter to parents, admitting 'mistakes were made' at the event and that all children should have had the same amount of time enjoying the celebrations.

[b] She added: 'Even prisons don't punish you twice. Imagine getting ten years for a crime and then two days before you get out they give you another ten years.'

[c] The punishment applied to children who did not have the school's 'always badge', given to the best-behaved pupils, but furious parents said they had paid the same £10 fee for the party as everyone else. Kelly McCarthy, whose child attends the school, said students had already been disciplined for misbehaviour over the past year with detentions and missed playtimes.
