

Call of the wild

Guatam Sapkota managed to attract hundreds of crows at a recent ‘crow show’ in Kathmandu, Nepal, with his unique chirping noises. “I told them to come, sit, be quiet and fly away,” said Sapkota, who does the shows to raise awareness about the conservation of birds. He says he can imitate the sounds of 251 kinds of birds and plans to broaden his conservation message with an album that remixes Nepali songs with the sound of a crane (the feathered kind, rather than the mechanical variety).
