

A New Approach

Re “Bitter irony of revolutions” (Victor Davis Hanson, June 11):
The U.S.A. had a black president and Americans were told hope and change would follow. But it didn't. Political correctness shapes behaviour. Now, police have been killed on the job both in Canada and U.S.A. Some cops, unfortunately, are criminally violent with perpetrators. Is the solution to abolish the police? Clearly both south and north of the border a new approach is indicated. Hanson outlines the irony of revolution that 42. We all need police protection, but we do not ask for cruelty and killing over marginal and non-violent infractions. Surely our species has evolved enough to make the needed change without throwing the baby out with the bathwater.

Larry Sylvester
Acton, Ontario

Torontosun.com, 2020